tain and reliable trade which due attention to the wants of the local community would build up, has been too much overlooked, and the importance and profitableness of the through trade unduly magnified. It is said that of the millions received on English roads hundred insurgents engaged in the insurover seventy per cent, is paid by passengers rection at Pesaro. who do not travel over seven miles .-Continental roads show the same result .--In this country, says the Times :- "The Philadelphia, Germantown, and Norristown Road, which is seven miles to Germansented to the people, whose emment fitness and town, and sixteen to Norristown, cost some $2,000,000, and when chartered men crowd-

The stock sunk so low that it disappeared from the Broker's Board, and went beg- ference with with Count Reichburg had reeing for buyers at seventy-live cents a share. A new management took possession of its affairs, re-organized its whole operations, Enforcement of the Laws, to which we pledge our lowered the fares, quintupled the number of trips, taking in and setting down passengers nadivided support.

Resolved. That we are ever ready to maintain at every little lane along the whole route, and by every possible contrivance consulted the public convenience. The effect of this change of management was almost miraculous. The ears were soon so thronged with sufficient proof that all political platforms made by political aspirants are are full of corruption, added, the frequency of the trips was increased, and so high a state of financial prosperity resulted that the stock rose eight dollars above its par of fifty dollars, and the holders of the stock felt safe in anticipating at least ten per cent dividends. Real estate rose five times in value, and sold quickly to new comers, who built houses and became permanent customers of the road. The great fact was proven that the way traffic, properly cultivated, would not only extricate a railway from insolvency, but would build up a town. On other American roads similar facts have been developed in relation to the freight business. On the New York Central road in 1858, the profits on the through freight amounted to Silli,000 and the way freight amounted to 8823,000. On the Camden and Amboy road in 1845 the way traffic was but 1,151 tons. The policy of stimulating the way trade was then adopted, cheap stations built at cross roads, and rains run to accommodate the farmers, trucksters, poultry dealers, &c., and under

While way fores have increased two thirds per annum, though fares have not doubled in twenty years. This policy has so stimulated travel that while but 58 trains were run daily in 1849, in 1859 the increased business demanded 144 trains. The crisis of 1857 produced no diminution of its prosperity. It now pays sen per cent to stockholders, a bonus to the State and has a surplus of $342,000, and no floating debt. The managers attribute the greater portion of this prosperity to the local business. Facts such as these are attracting the attention and inviting the emulation of the railroad men in all sections of the country, and we are sure cannot fail to awaken the clear headed gentlemen who control the railroad interests of this section of the State to the importance of an assiduous attention to the wants, interests, and convenience of the beal community whose energy and money built the roads, and in whose patronage, if properly cared for, will be found the surest foundation for profitable business.
